The federalization of European debt, long taboo for the Germans, became possible. 53u6y8">This change will almost certainly lead to tensions between the European Union and the incoming administration of President-elect Joseph R. Biden Jr., who, as one official put it, "is part of the Euro-American décor."Mr. Biden, a regular at the Munich Security Conference for decades, is by formation and experience a man with a traditional view of the alliance: The United States leads, allies fall into line. But the world has changed. The impact of the Trump years, and of an America AWOL during the global crisis caused by the pandemic, cannot be waved away."You can only lose trust once," said Nicole Bacharan, a French political analyst. "When it's gone, it's gone. We've learned that an American president can just undo things."Most European governments are delighted to see Mr. Trump go. They believe American decency has returned in Mr. Biden. They do not, however, necessarily equate their relief with a long honeymoon, even if the incoming president and Antony J. Blinken, his nominee for secretary of state, are aware that times have changed, and that solving big problems demands the give-and-take multilateralism that Mr. Trump shunned.<aside class="css-ew4tgv" aria-label="companion column"></aside><figure class="css-1ef8w8q e1g7ppur0" aria-label="media" role="group">Image<figcaption class="css-18crmh6 ewdxa0s0">Most European governments believe American decency has returned in President-elect Joseph R. Already France and Germany have cooperated on a voluminous dossier covering all major international issues and handed it to officials in the future Biden administration.Of course, the ailing European Union that produced Brexit and rising nationalism has not gone away. A union perceived as too bureaucratic and insufficiently democratic. The divisions that plague a now 27-member entity, with 19 of those countries sharing a currency but none of them sharing a government, will not disappear.Still, the European Union has been jolted into a new sense of its value. Brexit looks like a one-off. The nations of Europe have seen up close that a divorce is always a defeat – and a negotiation whose end point is new barriers is, too.Britain's decision to leave was quintessentially of its era. An act inspired by an imaginary past, borne aloft by an imaginary future, turbocharged by social media and enabled by the withered hold of truth. It was a failure of the dream of a "United States of Europe" – on the continent that British and American troops died to liberate from the Nazis – first articulated by Winston Churchill in 1946, when he spoke of a free Europe offering "the simple joys and hopes that make life worth living."

Everyone in Europe, and Britain is, has lost something. But as Jean Monnet, one of the founding fathers of what would become the European Union, observed: "Europe makes itself in crises."
